Presenter Information:

Tracy Milligan became a diabetes school advocate when she was told her son Jared could not attend his neighborhood school unless a parent came every time he needed insulin. Tracy and other parents worked with the Association to pass a Florida state law ending the kind of discrimination Jared faced.

Crystal Jackson is the Director of the American Diabetes Association's Safe at School Campaign. She is considered a national authority on the rights of students with diabetes and is a parent of a child with diabetes.
